Welcome to a New Open Access Scientific Journal

Social Space is an interdisciplinary Polish-English bilingual journal of monolingual texts. It includes articles, essays, review essays, progress reports, book reviews, discussions, and commentaries. Taking sociology as a departure point, the journal intends to promote a dialogue between scientists working in individual social sciences, including social anthropology, social psychology, social geography, political science, cultural studies, etc. It focuses on the interrelation of society and space by balancing between the sociologists' finding that space does matter and the human geographers' belief that space itself explains few, if anything. The journal enables rapid publication and discussion on research work for the benefit of each discipline involved.

The journal publishes theoretical and methodological, as well as firmly theoretically based empirical papers that contribute to a cross-disciplinary debate. A philosophy of the journal is that good theories and strong methodologies are essential for successful practice. Critical texts, including book reviews, are welcome. Both quantitative and qualitative texts are accepted for publication, based on either positivist or humanist methodology, if they meet high standards of scholarly peer-review.

While the journal intends to be international in scope, papers accurately promoting Polish concepts, theories and points of view, less known in the world literature, are especially welcome. This also applies to manuscripts authored by scientists from outside the core of the world socio-economic system, which give chances of direct discussion with no mediation of the core. Papers may be submitted in English or Polish with English abstracts.
